REGULATION 103(H). The Board shall accredit research activities of registered attorneys and judges, upon written application by individuals engaged in such activities, provided the activity (1) has produced published findings in the form of articles, chapters, monographs or books, personally authored, in whole or part, by the applicant; (2) contributes substantially to the continuing legal education of the applicant and other attorneys or judges; and (3) is not done in the ordinary course of the practice of law, the performance of judicial duties, or other regular employment.

REGULATION 104(G). In awarding credit for research activity, under Regulations 103(h) and 103(i), the Board shall consider the following factors: (1) the content, level and length of the published findings or committee papers; (2) the originality of the published findings or committee papers with the individual applicant; and (3) the nature of the publication in which they appear, if any.
